TOM'S £1M SHAM

Cruise and Katie

EXCLUSIVE

THE lavish Italian wedding of Tom Cruise and Katie Holmes was a five-star sham, the Daily Star can reveal.

A-list guests crowding into the £1million bash near Rome included Victoria Beckham, Jennifer Lopez, Brooke Shields and Jim Carrey.

But Hollywood couple Tom and Katie had actually already tied the knot in a low-key ceremony in Los Angeles a week earlier.

TERROR WAR TO LAST 30 YEARS

by DEAN VALLER

THE war on terror could last an agonising 30 years, experts warned last night.

Top military chiefs fear British troops could remain in conflict with terrorist groups for decades to come.

And the Government is facing a backlash at home, where six out of 10 Brits now want our soldiers pulled out of Iraq. It all comes after a further £100million was pledged towards rebuilding Iraq and another £500m was earmarked to help fund classrooms in Pakistan to replace religious schools blamed for rising extremism.

Prof Paul Rogers, of The Oxford Research Group, a US security think-tank, said there was "every prospect" of the war on terror stretching 30 years.

He said a "fundamental rethink of policy" was needed by the US.

But he warned that President George Bush's opinion was likely to be complicated by the value of oil in the Middle East.

Tony Blair was in Pakistan yesterday for a summit with President Pervez Musharraf.

Forces

He pledged to fund moderate Islamic schools and provide more job opportunities to erode the extremists' support base.

He also vowed to stamp out Taliban insurgents in Afghanistan and Pakistan.

The Premier said the war against extremism would fail unless more was done to support moderate political and religious forces.

Mr Blair added: "This terrorism that we are facing, of which one manifestation is what has happened in Afghanistan, has been a long time going and will take a long time to defeat."

His visit came amid heightened Taliban violence in Afghanistan, where more than 30 UK troops have died this year. Last week, Mr Blair appeared to admit for the first time, in an interview with Sir David Frost on Arab television channel Al Jazeera, that the war in Iraq had been a disaster.

And Gordon Brown has said he wants to see a withdrawal of soldiers sooner, rather than later.

Speaking to servicemen in Basra, he said: "We have got to help the Iraqi economy get back on its feet so we can see Iraq running its own affairs."

And Mr Blair added: "And so we can see a reduction in our troops in the next few months."

Spooks probe spy poisoning

MI5 is investigating claims that a former KGB spy was poisoned in London by Russian agents.

Exiled Alexander Litvinenko, 44, a former KGB colonel was allegedly slipped highly toxic thallium after a secret meeting in a sushi bar. Friends say he has only a 50% chance of survival and looks "like a ghost" in London's University College Hospital.

Litvinenko fell ill on November 1 investigating the recent murder of dissident Russian journalist Anna Politkovskaya. He was handed papers naming her killers as four of Russia's federal security agency.

A pal of Litvinenko said: "He's convinced he has been poisoned at the instigation of President Putin."

Frock horror

GEORGE Bush and Russian premier Vladimir Putin looked a right pair of softies yesterday.

The presidents were matching blue and silk Vietnamese tunics at an economic summit in the capital Hanoi.

They donned the colourful gowns after striking a deal to let Russia join the World Trade Organisation. But fashion gurus say they should have stuck to debating issues like Iran and North Korea.

WATER PRESSURE

MILLIONS of households in England could be forced to install water meters in their homes.

Environment Minister Ian Pearson wants to cut the amount of water being used after this summer's drought in the South.

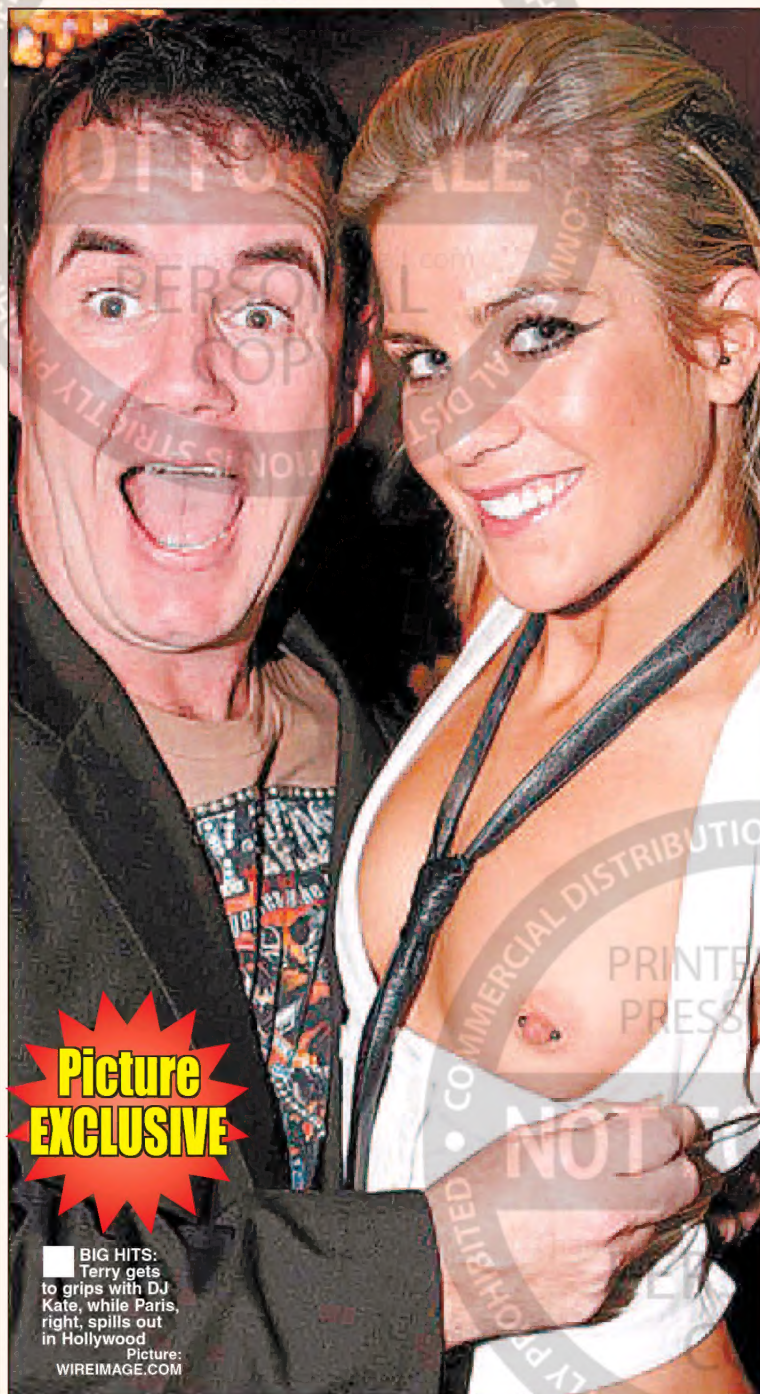

New plans would make it easier for companies to apply for "water scarcity status" and impose metering on customers.

Consumer Council spokesman Andrew Marsh said: "This is a common sense approach because they are concentrating on areas which are generally water-scarce."

"And not just those which had a drought this summer."

WHOOOPS! Party girls Kate Lawler and Paris Hilton really let it all hang out as they went out on the razz.

And Big Brother babe Kate reckons she'll be in big trouble when her mum sees our saucy shot.

The fun-loving blonde, 26, had been working as a DJ at the Glasshouse night at Club Mission in Leeds.

Pierced

And as she partied in the early hours of Sunday morning, cheeky club boss Terry George, 41, decided she needed a bit of fresh air. He pulled down her skimpy top to reveal a nipple piercing.

Kate squealed: "My mum will kill me! She doesn't know I've had my nipple pierced." Terry said: "She'd been teasing me about having a piercing but wouldn't have any pictures taken. So I just pulled down her top. She took it in good humour, though. Kate had a great night and the crowd loved her set."

Meanwhile, socialite and hotel heiress Paris, 25, also boobed as she enjoyed a night out with mega-rich boyfriend Stavros Niarchos, 21.

The bleary-eyed babe couldn't keep herself covered up as she smooched with her fella after a fashion show by top lingerie firm Victoria's Secret in Hollywood.

During one of the on-off couple's splits, shipping heir Stavros had been spotted getting cosy with actress Lindsay Lohan, 20.

But their lovey-dovey antics over the weekend prove that Paris has clearly nipped that romance in the bud.

Hollywood pair Tom and Katie's star-studded bash

EXCLUSIVE by CAMERON MILLAR

HOLLYWOOD superstar Tom Cruise's fairy-tale wedding to actress Katie Holmes was a £1million FRAUD.

We can reveal that the Mission: Impossible actor and his bride had been married for a week when they walked up the aisle in Italy on Saturday.

Alien-worshiper Tom has admitted privately that the service, conducted by a Scientology minister, was not the real deal. And his agent Arnold Robinson confirmed that Tom, 44, and Katie, 27, had "officialised" their marriage in Los Angeles before jetting to Bracciano, near Rome.

The lovers were last night at a honeymoon hideaway in the Maldives. And Katie was sure to tickle Tom's fancy – the former Dawson's Creek actress had shelled out £1,000 on sexy ostrich feather lingerie.

Sources said her sexy selection included a £90 thong, a £50 garter belt and a £30 set of silk stockings. But the star attractions in her collection were a £100 lace bra inset with Swarovski crystals and a £200 silk nightgown, complete with ostrich feather trim.

A source close to La Bra Lingerie boutique in Hollywood, where she made her purchase, told us: "They weren't all white, and they certainly weren't all virginal."

Bizarre

Tom and Katie, who have a baby daughter, Suri, took off on honeymoon after celebrating their match at Odeschalchi Castle with a host of celeb pals, including Jennifer Lopez, 37, Brooke Shields, 41, and Jim Carrey, 45.

Also present were the two children Tom adopted with former wife Nicole Kidman, 39 – 13-year-old Isabella and Connor, 11.

Katie had her first dance with her dad to What a Wonderful Life – then hit the floor with Tom to Fleetwood Mac's Song Bird.

The pair both wore Armani creations for the ceremony. But it emerged yesterday that the castle was second choice for the bash. They wanted to book the exclusive Villa D'Este hotel at Lake Como, but the deal fell through.

Katie had resigned herself to holding the celebration back home in the States. But then Roberta Armani – niece of designer Giorgio, 72 – told her about Odeschalchi.

A source close to Roberta said: "They got very close as she was helping design the wedding dress. Roberta mentioned that she was a friend of Princess Maria, who owns the castle. It was a fairy-tale venue for a fairy-tale wedding."

But that's not how more than 40,000 furious fans felt after waiting outside in the rain for hours without even getting a glimpse of the couple.

Even Bracciano's mayor Patrizia Riccioni felt locals had been snubbed, saying: "It would have been nice for them to wave at the townfolk. They welcomed them and put up with a lot of inconvenience, so it would have been nice if they had made a gesture."

POSH 'N TXT

by MARIANNA PARTASIDES

FOOTBALL ace David Beckham may have had to duck out of the big bash early, but he still enjoyed every minute of it – by text.

Wife Victoria kept the former England captain filled in on all the gossip after he flew back to Spain for a Real Madrid game.

Posh, 32, even handed her phone over to celeb pals at the party so David, 31, could chat to them as he sat on the sidelines.

Gutted

One source said: "David was gutted that he couldn't be there for the actual ceremony."

"His whistle-stop visit on Friday night was a bit of a compromise but he had to uphold his football commitments."

"Listening to it down the phone line was fun, though. It was the next best thing to being there."

While David could hear the fun, Victoria was living it. She partied until 4am, according to sources.

David was forced to fly back to Spain just hours before the wedding after Real boss Fabio Capello ordered him not to miss the game against Racing Santander – despite the fact that he couldn't play due to a knee injury.

In fact Capello, 60, had earlier said Becks had been banned from travelling to Italy at all.

But yesterday the Real boss said: "We gave him permission to travel because the doctor said he could. He has not missed a single minute of his rehabilitation."

And they have even been coming up with songs for the brave bug, including Can't Get You Out Of My Bum and I Should Be So Cocky.

DEAN Gaffney has complained after cruel TV bosses restricted the celebs' luxury items to a minimum this year.

He said: "I wanted to bring in an inflatable chair but they wouldn't let me." Big-chested Faith joked: "I didn't need to. I have got my own inflatables."

THE jungle stars have been begging for PRODUCERS fear that Faith might walk after her tearful breakdown over Jan's nagging and moaning.

SHOW boss Jim Allen volunteered to do Jan's snake trial to find out what it was like to be bitten by one of the reptiles. A source said: "He shrieked when the snake dug its fangs in his hand but now he knows what he puts the stars through."

PSYCHIC Michelle Knights predicts that bolshy babe Phina will be the first evictee on Friday. The clairvoyant said: "She is lacking empathy."

MAD MATT

Bosses fear
bored hunk

from PETER DYKE in Oz

TV chiefs fear "Mad" Matt Willis is a jungle timebomb just waiting to go off.

The 23-year-old former Busted star is bored with having nothing to do in camp and is ready to explode.

Bonkers Matt has been wandering off to the bush telegraph to rant at producers in private at least 10 times a day.

One crew member said: "There's a lot going on behind the scenes. We have clips which haven't been shown of him getting more and more angry."

"He's bored out of his skull. He's been shouting his head off that the lack of activity in the jungle is doing his head in."

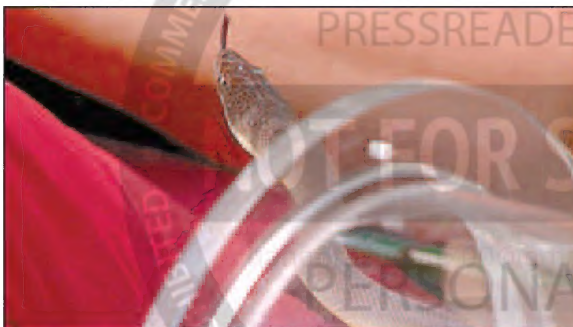

GMTV presenter Carla Romano, 37, in Oz reporting for her breakfast show, told how she'd seen censored footage of the pop hunk.

She said: "There are clips where he shows how hungry, tired and bored he is. And he's increasingly angry about it."

Before he went on to the show, Matt admitted the one thing he feared more than spiders and snakes was boredom. He

JAN BEAMING

JAN Leeming was beaming after winning 10 meals for her hungry campers yesterday - but only after a screaming fit at being picked on by TV viewers.

She burst into tears when she was chosen for a third Bush-tucker Trial.

Jan, 64, appeared clueless as to why she was being victimised for her moaning.

She stormed off to the bush telegraph and sobbed to producers that she could not understand why she was being targeted.

She asked if she could take Jason Donovan, 38, for support on her trial, called SnakeBite, where she had to fish food tokens from a tank of pythons.

But afterwards she ruined her glory by going on and on about the trial.

David Gest, 53, bitched: "Someone is thinking they're the hottest st in the world."

Pictures: TIM MERRY / ITV / REX FEATURES

TOP TIP: Myleene Klass was allowed only two bikinis in camp - but she makes the best of one to show why she's 7-2 fave to be crowned queen of the jungle.

RANT AND DECKING: Angry Matt

said: "My biggest worry is getting really bored. I have no idea how I'll cope."

Meanwhile, bosses are so convinced of a jungle romance, they have changed the rules of tonight's "split camp" stunt.

The unsuspecting celebs are to be split into two warring gangs, one group in the main site and the other at Snake Rock Camp, a mile away.

Originally, the producers ruled that once split the stars wouldn't be allowed to see one another again. But now pals will be allowed special visiting rights.

A source said: "There are some relationships blossoming and we'd hate to see them fade away."

Each day the tribes will compete in Bushtucker Trials and celebrity treasure chests in a bid to win food and treats for their pals.

Viewers will vote as usual for someone to do the trials.

SHUT YER GOB, DAD

Kim's fury at Rod booze blast

by NADINE LINGE

ANGRY Kimberly Stewart yesterday blasted back at dad Rod's claims that boozing has given her liver disease.

She fumed: "He's got a big mouth - and not just when he's singing."

Rocker Rod, 61, claimed last week his girl was suffering from the same illness that cost football legend George Best his life.

He even said party-loving Kim, 27, had been forced to give up the booze to save her life.

But his angry daughter last night insisted there was nothing wrong with her health.

To prove it, she was out partying over the weekend at Jack Osbourne's 21st bash at The Mirage in Las Vegas.

Model Kimberly said: "I don't have a liver disease. I was exhausted and feeling sick from burning the candle at both ends."

"My doctor told me to cut back on drinking and smoking. I have, and I feel so much better.

OUTBURST: Dad Rod

"I love my dad but sometimes he has a big mouth - and not just when he's singing."

Kimberly has been a regular on the Hollywood party circuit and counts George Best's son Calum, 25, and Paris Hilton, also 25, among her pals.

Rod claimed last week: "She discovered that she had a very serious illness from drinking too much. She said, 'I'm half-Scottish, I thought I was allowed to drink a lot'."

But he back-tracked on his comments last night, saying in a statement: "Kimberly had an inflamed liver. She's perfectly fine now."

Rod is famously protective of his seven children. Earlier this year, he had a bust-up with TV star Russell Brand, 31, over his false claim that he'd romped with Kimberly.

A pal said: "Rod is being very supportive of Kimberly, and has told her she must take care of herself and her health."

Nadine Linge is a daily star columnist.

PAEDO STORM HITS TOP COP

Fury as he gives 'OK for child sex'

BACKLASH: Police boss Grange

A POLICE chief who claimed men who had sex with girls of 13 were NOT paedophiles was yesterday blasted by a children's charity.

Chief Constable Terry Grange said he saw nothing wrong with a man aged 30 having sex with a teenage girl.

And the head of the Dyfed/Powys police force added that only those who slept with girls under 13 should face prosecution.

But charity Kidscape yesterday hit back at the Dyfed/Powys police chief's comments, branding him "misguided and irresponsible".

Disturbing

Founder Michele Elliott said: "The definition of a paedophile is a person who is sexually attracted to children. In this country, we class this as children under 16."

"I think he is being irresponsible. He seems to be only talking about child protection for those under the age of 13. It is very disturbing, especially for a police officer."

"Girls aged nine, 10 and 11 are

by NADINE LINGE

now wearing bras, they're having periods. They are no longer children in his definition. So I think he's on very dicey ground here."

UK law bans anyone from having sex with under-16s. If the child is 13 or older and consenting, it is classed as "unlawful sexual intercourse". If they are under 13, the offence is rape.

But Mr Grange, 56, who is also the Association of Chief Police Officers' spokesman on child protection and managing sex offenders, said: "The closer they get to 16 the more it becomes a grey area."

"We are talking about very young people when it is paedophilia and I wouldn't want to mix up kids who are just the wrong side of 16 with paedophiles."

"I don't personally adhere to the 15-year-old being with a 20-year-old boyfriend being paedophilia - or even if the boyfriend is 30."

But yesterday he apparently tried to backtrack on his comments, claiming in a BBC interview: "I was referring to 13, 14 and 15-year-old girls and boys, nothing else."

Zeta's Darling Buds...

POUTING Catherine Zeta Jones proves she's still queen of the curves at a Hollywood bash.

The Welsh beauty, 37, appeared to have slimmed down alarmingly at an awards ceremony last month.

But the shapely former Darling Buds of May babe is back to her bouncy best now.

ACCUSED: Sacha as Borat

Village battles Borat

by DAVE HURST
HIT film Borat may be banned in America.
Top lawyer Ed Fagan is taking on comedian Sacha Baron Cohen and movie makers in court.
He claims they misled and exploited Romanian extras from the poverty-stricken village of Glod.
Villagers claim they were tricked into participating in the film, which they believed was a documentary about their hardship.

Dignity

One man was portrayed as the "village mechanic and abortionist". He says he thought he was playing a welder.

Mr Fagan said: "This case is not about money but about dignity.
"The producers need to pay for taking the right of choice from the villagers of Glod."

But Gregg Brilliant, of 20th Century Fox, said the villagers were cheering and laughing at the jokes during filming.

Hunt for fake £s

THE UK has been flooded with £10million worth of fake pound coins after the moulds vanished from a shut-down mint.

Coin casts have even turned up for sale on internet auction site eBay, say detectives.

One senior officer said: "We are trying to trace the missing moulds. It's a painstaking task. The casts vanished after the Birmingham Mint closed.

"Some may have been sold by workers trying to make a few bob by flogging off souvenirs. Others may simply have been stolen."

HOT BABES FALL FOR TALL GUYS...

That must be how Crouchy pulled Abbey

HIGH LIFE: Crouchy strides out with sexy Abbey

Picture: MARK CAMPBELL / MCPICS

SIZE really does matter when it comes to pulling a hot babe.

And that could explain how beanpoles like England star Peter Crouchy bag the sexiest girls.

The 6ft 7in striker, 25, is the envy of his team-mates after hooking up with gorgeous 20-year-old model Abbey Clancy, recently voted Britain's sexiest WAG.

A study has revealed that when singletons are speed dating, extra inches are all important. Academics from the University of Essex found that for every inch taller a man is than his "rivals" at the speed dating tables, the number of women who want to meet him again soars by 5%.

And tubby fellas can relax - love handles make little difference.

Curvy

But curvy girls could be disappointed. Too much weight dashes hopes of success.

A woman who is clinically obese is likely to be selected by 70% fewer men.

The researchers, economists Michele Belot and Marco Francesconi, looked at the choices made by 1,800 women and 1,800 men at speed dating events across Britain.

Speed dating provides an easy way to measure how relationships can develop in everyday situations.

And it seems that success boils down to the

by LIZZIE CATT

strength or weakness of the opposition.

Instead of hunting for a particular "type" at these events, men and women judge each potential partner on the others there.

If a man there is of average height, he will make a better impression with the women if the rest of the men are short.

Mr Francesconi said: "The mix at any speed dating event is pretty random. The role of individual preferences is overshadowed by that of market opportunities."

Men selected an average of five women they wanted to see again.

But women chose only 2.6 men.

PAY OFF EARLY

Wouldn't it be great to see your mortgage shrink before your very eyes – until one day it disappeared altogether? Well now you can make it happen.

Different approach

The One account offers a different approach to your finances that allows you to shrink both your mortgage and your monthly repayment. It does this by combining your mortgage and your current account, so that every penny of your money works towards reducing the size of your home loan.

When you pay your monthly salary and any savings into the account, your mortgage debt immediately shrinks and so does the interest you repay each month. This has exactly the same effect as overpaying your mortgage, except you don't have to pay any extra. You could even see your mortgage shrink in size from one month to the next.

You are also free to overpay whenever you have cash to spare, and if you have any savings you can pay those in as well to help shrink your mortgage even faster. One day you might find your mortgage has shrunk so much it completely disappears, years ahead of schedule. Just imagine life with an ever shrinking mortgage. All that extra cash to spend on enjoying yourself, or to save for your future.

Amazing mortgage shrinker

SOUND too good to be true? Well it isn't. You can make your home loan shrink with an all-in-one mortgage from the One account. Just go to www.oneaccount.com and click on the amazing mortgage shrinker and follow the simple instructions.

Tap in your property value, the size of your mortgage and a few details like your salary and spending. Then click "Go ahead – shrink it!" and prepare for some good news. One day, you will eventually pay off your mortgage. With the One account's mortgage shrinker, that one day could be much sooner than you think.

TOP MARKS FOR THE ONE ACCOUNT

ANNIE and Jeff Cox are looking forward to paying their mortgage off six years early thanks to re-mortgaging with the One account.

The couple heard from friends that the One account was flexible, easy to use, and could help them pay off their mortgage early.

"We were not planning on changing our mortgage, but we looked into it on the strength of our friends recommendation and now we can't thank them enough, it suits us down to the ground," says Annie, an agricultural secretary. Annie and Jeff, who live with their twins Ellen and Clare, remortgaged their three bedroom detached home in Norfolk.

They had the property revalued and borrowed some of the equity to pay for a second property which they are now renting out. They have also made some home improvements to the family home including a landscaped garden and a brand new kitchen.

"One of the great things about the One account is that it's so easy to set up, and simple to use. There's 24 hour telephone and internet banking for whatever you need.

We needed to move fast to get the flat we wanted, and the One account were so efficient with our application that it was all done and dusted with time to spare, the customer service is absolutely fantastic." Annie and Jeff, an estate agent, pay their salaries and any savings into the One account, instantly reducing their outstanding balance. They could now pay off their mortgage in 10 years compared to the 16 years on their old mortgage. "It's the best financial move we have ever made" says Annie.

HOW TO SHRINK YOUR MORTGAGE IN THREE EASY STEPS

1 Visit the mortgage shrinker, the online calculator at oneaccount.com and see if you could shrink your mortgage, just by combining it with your current account.

2 Be amazed at the results. The calculations are done instantly and show three key things:

- How many years you could clear your mortgage ahead of schedule.

- How much money this could save you.
- What interest rate you would need to pay to save the same amount.

3 Give them a call on 08456 10 20 73. The One account will answer any of your questions and if you decide to apply, will sort out everything for you.

5 REASONS TO FIND OUT MORE -

- 2 You can even take payment breaks and do something you've always dreamed of. Interest will continue to accrue during any breaks and will need to be repaid by the end of the term.
- 3 You could also borrow extra money at the same rate as your mortgage. Any extra borrowing will be secured against your property.
- 4 The One account will sort everything out for you, even your direct debits and standing orders.
- 5 Over 80% of customers are on track to pay off their mortgages early.

Rumbled in the jungle

MY FORMULA FOR WHO'LL WIN

H EY, has anyone else noticed that I'm A Celebrity's David Gest looks exactly like co-host Ant McPartlin would look if you inflated him with a bicycle pump and then briefly set light to his head?

No? Right, well, I guess it's just me then. Fair enough.

Anyway, that's not what I want to talk to you about today.

No, what I want to talk to you about is my ingenious new scientific formula for figuring out who's going to win this show.

You know those barmy stories we're always reading about boffins devising a mathematical equation for, I dunno, taking the perfect penalty kick or guaranteeing yourself a six-in-a-bed romp with Girls

Aloud? Well, this formula of mine is along remarkably similar lines, even down to the fact that it could well be b*cks.

The way I see it, to be a potential jungle champ requires two vital qualities:

● You need to be able to take the pee out of yourself.

● You need to be a bit damaged. The first of these qualities makes us like you. The second makes us pity you.

And my recipe for victory? Precisely two parts of the first quality to one part of the second. Sorry, but no other combination will do.

Kerry Katona? Phil Tufnell? Carol Thatcher? I rest my case.

Without the self-deprecating humour, you're basically stuffed from day one.

So the only real point in Jan or Phina sticking around is if the hunger in camp hits desperation level and there's a majority verdict in favour of roasting them on a spit.

But without some kind of personal flaw to accompany your jungle jollity, you end up looking a bit pointless and shallow.

So the knack is to display lots of the aren't-I-fun stuff, while occasionally reminding us viewers you're a bit unhinged.

Between them, our jungle chums have plenty of disturbing flaws – Matt stubbornly refuses to stop using Adolf Hitler's barber; Lauren is a normal-sized woman who foolishly agreed to an arse transplant from Michelle McManus; Dean Gaffney is Dean Gaffney.

But in the end, my ingenious scientific formula points to only one person who can win this thing – and that's the funny, freaky David Gest.

And he's the favourite in any case. So, yep, this has been a complete waste of time, really. Sorry.

Howlin' Gail in Corrie

CORONATION Street (ITV1) was hilarious last week. Seriously.

New Rovers boss Steve McDonald getting earache from the girls, Becky giving us her greasy-spoon version of Basil Fawlty and Gail introducing herself at parenting class by making a noise like a baby hamster in a liquidiser.

Honestly, it had more laughs than an entire DVD box set of The Green Green Grass. Mind you, so has Crimewatch.

SURANNE Jones's Strictly Confidential (ITV1, Thursday) is the daffiest kind of rumpy-packed twaddle. But episode one did at least teach me something.

I now know, in a sex therapist's terminology, AA stands for "autoerotic asphyxiation" – as opposed to what the rest of us assume it means.

No doubt RAC involves a cucumber.

TELL me, does anyone ever sit through the whole of Children in Need (BBC1, Friday) from start to finish?

If you did so yourself, can you confirm whether they accepted the tenner I pledged if Natasha "Even Smugger Than Vorderman" Kaplinsky, left, would kindly go boll her head?

"I HAVEN'T had a number two in four days," confessed the former Busted star Matt Willis on I'm a Celebrity. Or a Number One in two years, right, mate?

THE most interesting revelation so far on I'm a Celebrity? Gay Scott Henshall announcing: "I can't be arsed when I don't have food..."

I'm a TV reviewer... get me out of here

I N case you've been fretting about my recent absence, I should explain I've spent the last two weeks in Australia. Nothing to do with I'm a Celeb – just staying with friends.

And my first priority on arriving in such an exciting, exotic, far-flung location? Got it in one – I put the telly on. Force of habit, I'm afraid.

What was interesting was how many Aussie shows were almost identical to what we have here, only far roper. Instead of The X Factor, for instance, we had Australian Idol, where there were just three drowning gimps in contention by the time I left.

And instead of Strictly Come Dancing we had Dancing With The Stars, featuring precisely zero stars I'd actually heard of.

The rest of the nightly schedules were crammed full of imports, mostly cheap American ones featuring excessive body counts and lots of shouting.

The absolute nationwide ratings-topper was medical drama Gray's Anatomy, which is actually quite good but gets about six viewers over here.

I think I hit rock-bottom, viewing-wise, when I found myself snubbing all the terrestrial options.

And I switched over to cable to watch Stoke's 1-0 win over Coventry at a fog-bound Britannia Stadium. Yes, all 90 minutes of it.

By the time I boarded my flight back to Heathrow, I was making a solemn vow. Never again, I promised, would I slag off British telly.

And then I realised I'd be out of a job, so sod that for a game of soldiers.

NOT too sure about the advice dished out on Ramsay's Kitchen Nightmares, which returned on Tuesday night (Channel 4).

Gobby Gordon was angered by the negative vibes he was getting from a struggling Costa Del Sol restaurant boss.

And he eventually told this hapless guy: "F yourself."

I guess that's always an option. But I'm sure the customers would have settled for a nice flamenco show.

DAFT Delusional Bint Of The Week: Stella, Mr Potatohead's latest lady friend in EastEnders (BBC1).

"It's nice to be somewhere," she told him on Thursday, "where everyone knows each other and is so friendly..."

CELL-PHONES

Lags can call on a life of luxury

INMATES at a jail nicknamed Butlins are to be given phones to stop them feeling lonely.

The lags will be able to chat to their friends and family in private instead of queuing for a payphone.

Bosses at the privately-run Lowdham Grange Category B prison in Nottinghamshire have already laid on en-suite showers and satellite telly for prisoners.

Services firm Seroco, which runs the jail, hopes the phones will make the prison population feel less depressed.

Spokesman Michael Clarke said: "Contact with families can help reduce re-offending."

"Prisoners can ring their kids before they go to bed. "If they are feeling sui-dal, they can ring family members late at night."

One inmate claimed the "luxurious" jail is better than his old flat.

Slammed

"My cell is more luxurious than my first bedsit," he said. "It's clean, modern and with duvets, posters, rugs and a DVD player."

Shadow Home Secretary David Davis slammed the plans last night. He insisted that prison should mean punishment.

He said: "The way to achieve this is to provide sufficient prison places, not access to phones."

Norman Brennan, director of the Victims of Crime Trust, said: "We should make prison a place that people do not want to go back to, not a luxury home."

The Home Office has insisted that there are no plans to install personal phones in public sector prisons.

GUARDS at Kirkham prison near Blackpool have nabbed a man breaking into the jail to leave a stash of goodies.

They found heroin, cannabis, tablets, three litres of vodka, three bottles of Southern Comfort and Bacardi, 80 fags, 18 DVDs, two mobile phones, and top-up cards in a wheeley bin.

TV HIT: The Smash ad

Aliens a poll smash

by SHERNA NOAH

A CLASSIC aliens ad for Smash instant potato has been voted the most iconic TV food commercial.

The 1974 ad featured a family of Martians chortling as they watched how primitive Earth people peeled, boiled and mashed potatoes.

The Martians received so much fan mail the agency that invented the creations had to prepare special literature for them.

Sexy

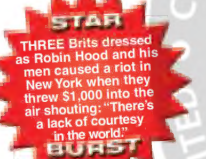

The Cadbury's Flake ads for "only the crumbliest, flakiest chocolate" came second in the poll for bbcgoodfood.com.

The 1991 ad became a legend for its suggestive sexy innuendo as a woman enjoys her Flake while relaxing in an overflowing bath.

The classic Hovis advert featuring a boy pushing a bike laden with loaves up a cobbled street came third in the poll.

Heinz's catchy "Beanz Meanz Heinz" jingle helped the series of long-running TV ads to win fourth place.

And the Bisto Kids, who were introduced way back in 1919, came in fifth.

Asbo-lute rubbish

A BOOK giving readers tips on getting an Asbo was last night blasted as "irresponsible".

How To Get An Asbo, published by Virgin Books, mocks single mums, the unemployed and Brummies.

But Alison Parsons, of Birmingham Council's Anti Social Behaviour Unit, said: "This book is absolutely terrible. The authors seem to believe it is amusing to abuse and intimidate people."
